Near Coniston, Cumbria and Red Fox

PICTORIAL BRITAIN

From this beautiful little tarn to the west of Coniston Water there is a splendid view of the Coniston Old Man and the Coniston Fells. Well-marked paths lead to the summit of the Old Man (802m). Intelligent and very resourceful, the fox is at home in this terrain. It is an opportunistic feeder with excellent hearing to allow it to detect small animals underground.

Facing the Atlantic on the eastern side of St Ives Bay, the exposed beach at Godrevy is popular with surfers. Godrevy Lighthouse is set on an island just off the coast, made famous by Virginia Woolf's 'To The Lighthouse'. The headlands and coves are rich in wildlife. Commonly seen in summer off the Cornish coast, basking sharks are the second largest fish in our oceans.

Old Winchester Hill is a popular South Downs beauty spot with glorious views over the valley to Beacon Hill and down to the sea and the Isle of Wight. The tiny hazel dormouse inhabits the local woodland, sleeping curled up in a ball by day to conserve energy and climbing branches by night in search of hazelnuts and seeds.

Near Lowick, Northumberland and Hedgehog

PICTORIAL BRITAIN

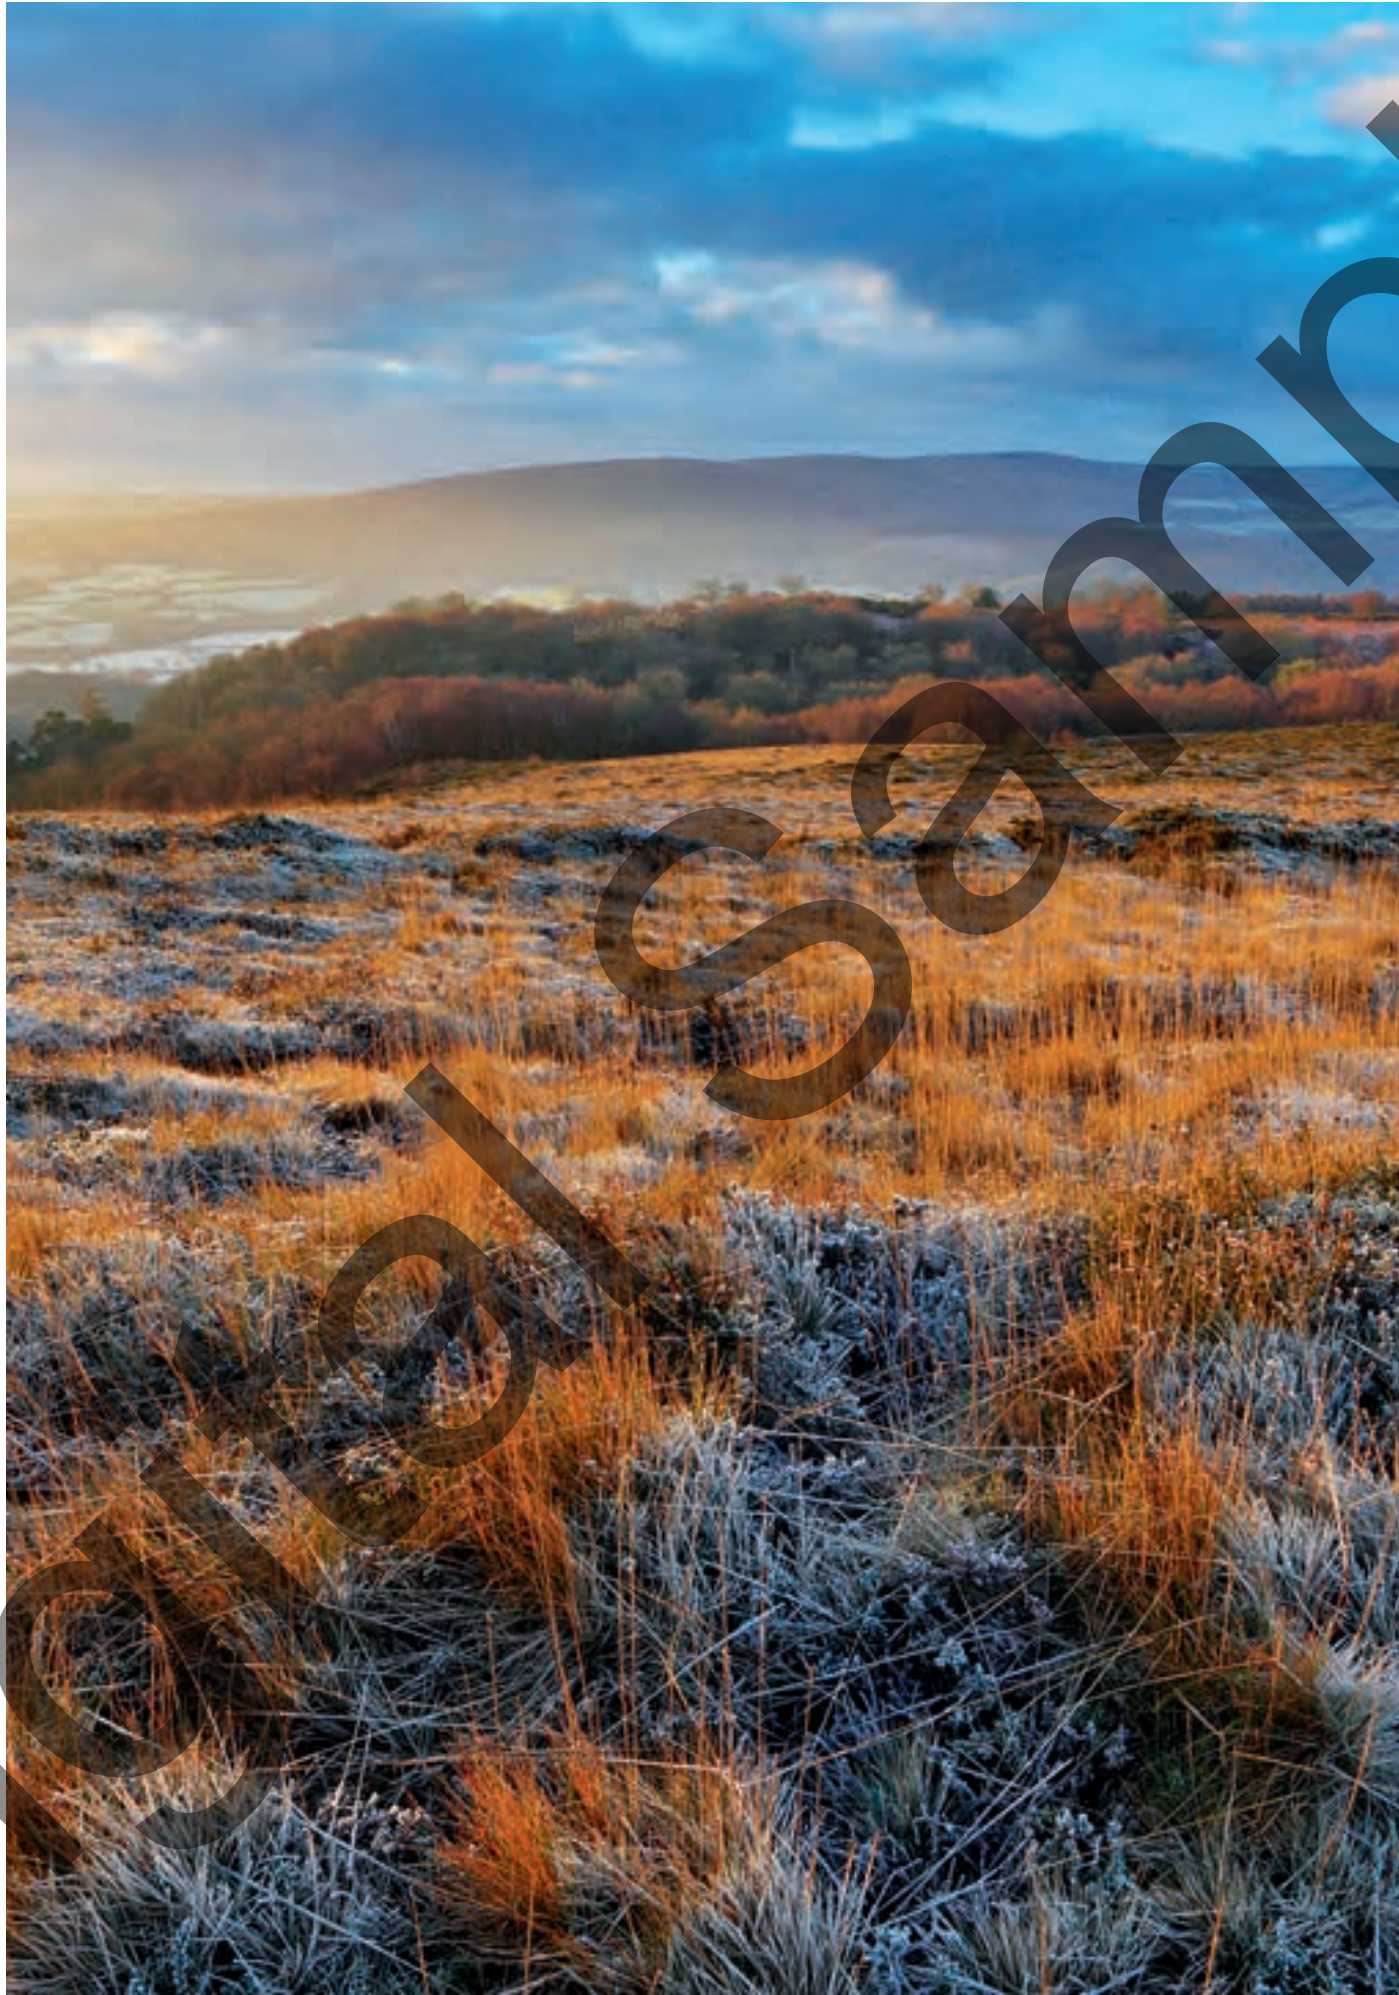

The Cheviot Hills, rolling from the Northumberland National Park across the border into Scotland, are an area of wild and expansive windswept hills and green tranquil valleys, seen here beyond a field of pale pink poppies near the village of Lowick. The hedgerows and woodlands are an ideal habitat for the elusive hedgehog.

Dunkery Beacon, Somerset and Polecat

PICTORIAL BRITAIN

From Selworthy Beacon, a scenic landmark near the Somerset coast with fine views of the Bristol Channel, Dunkery Beacon can be seen across the wild moorland. It is the highest point on Exmoor and has panoramic views. The sleek polecat, now a protected species, inhabits this rugged landscape. Mostly solitary and nocturnal, it preys on small rodents and birds.

Near Ripon, North Yorkshire and Goshawk

PICTORIAL BRITAIN

A silent wintry scene in beautiful unspoilt woodland near Ripon. This small city on the edge of the Dales has a magnificent 7th century cathedral, medieval streets with small alleys, many fascinating historic buildings and a fine Georgian marketplace. The goshawk, a powerful and rather fierce-looking raptor with a prominent brow, is found in these forested areas.
